25. Vorix Suppressor Certificate - Purpose-built for bolt-action platforms — optimized for supersonic .308 and .300 BLK subsonic performance, with strong results across .30 caliber and smaller cartridges. Rated for magnum rifle cartridges. Maximum Suppression. No Compromises. This is our quietest bolt action can. If your goal is simple—get the most suppression possible without running a giant, heavy suppressor—this is it. The VORIX 30 is built for shooters who want real performance on bolt guns, subsonic setups, and longer barrel rifles without turning their rifle into a front-heavy mess. Where this thing shines: This suppressor really comes alive on: Semi-auto subsonic. Supersonic bolt action. That's where you get a softer, more controlled tone and noticeable reduction at the muzzle. It's not just quieter—it's smoother. Less snap, less sharpness, just a more controlled sound signature. More volume, better suppression: Compared to the ALTUS, the VORIX has: More length. More internal volume. More stages to manage pressure. That allows it to hold gas longer and let it decay properly. End result: Better suppression. Softer impulse. More consistent performance. Still compact where it matters: This isn't some oversized, bulky suppressor. 7.5" length. 11.3 oz weight. 1.5" diameter. You're getting high-level suppression without jumping into the big, heavy can category. That matters on a hunting rifle or precision setup. 3D printed titanium construction: Fully additive titanium. No welds. No stacked tolerances. Internal geometry you can't get with traditional manufacturing. Built for consistency and long-term durability. We're honest about what it is: This is not a hard-use, full-auto suppressor. It's built for: Bolt guns, Hunting rifles, Precision setups, and Moderate semi-auto use (subsonic). If you want something to beat on all day with 5.56 or 6MM, that's what the HAVIC is for. VORIX 30 Highlights: Maximum Suppression Design: More internal volume and staging for stronger sound reduction and softer impulse. Compact for Its Performance Class: 7.5" length and 11.3 oz keeps it usable without getting bulky. Subsonic & Super Sonic Bolt Gun Performance: Where this suppressor really separates itself. Fully 3D-Printed Titanium: Stronger, cleaner construction with advanced internal geometry. Balanced Gas Management: Good suppression without excessive blowback on semi-autos. High-Temp Cerakote Finish: Built to handle heat and real-world use. What this is for: Hunters. Users with semi-auto subsonic and supersonic bolt action setups. Users wanting maximum suppression. What it's not for: Full-auto or hard-use abuse. High-volume training days. Lightest weight/minimalist setups (that's the ALTUS).

The morning will start with a good breakfast at the accommodation around 7.00-7.30am. We will leave for the hunting ground around 8.00-8.30am, which will be a short drive. The terrain is open mountain so the first hour of the morning is usually spent glassing and locating a herd of deer that can be approached. The guide will have very good knowledge of the deer behavior on the ground and where they will most probably be depending on the wind direction. Once deer are located then the stalk begins which could be several miles. Shots are usually taken from between 80 – 250m, this will depend on how confident the hunter is at shooting and how close you can get to the herd. A packed lunch will be arranged and taken with us on the mountain as you could well be out there all day. In most cases there will be roads up the mountain that you will be driven up in a 4x4 or you could be travelling in a Argo cat. Stags shot will be collected by the guide by Argo cat and taken back to a chiller. After shooting a stag you must tell the guide if you would like the cape for taxidermy before any cuts are made. Expect to be dropped off at the accommodation around 5 – 6pm, this will all depend on how far out on the mountain you end up hunting. Hunting Red stags in Scotland requires a reasonable level of fitness mostly, but we can accommodate for most people. The expected temps for September/October can be anywhere from -5°C - 15°C so you should think about having a good layering system of clothes with you.
